2 ISSUES TO BE DECIDED

4 1. Whether, based upon Janus Capital Group, Inc. v. First Derivative Traders,
 5 No. 09-525, 2011 WL 2297762, at *5 (U.S. Jun. 13, 2011), defendant Kimon P. Daifotis has 6 shown any grounds for the Court to change its prior decision that the Complaint sufficiently 7 states primary liability claims under Exchange Act Rule 10b-5, where the Complaint alleges a 8 number of misstatements that Daifotis spoke or that were attributed to him.

9 2. Whether the standards set forth in Janus apply to claims under Section 17(a) of 10 the Securities Act.

11 3. Whether the standards set forth in Janus apply to claims under Section 34(b) of 12 the Investment Company Act.

13 4. Whether the Complaint sufficiently states a claim for aiding-and-abetting Rule 14 10b-5 violations, and whether that issue is a proper subject of the present motion for 15 reconsideration.

1 Plaintiff, the United States Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”), states the 2 following in opposition to Defendant Kimon P. Daifotis’s (“Daifotis”) Motion for 3 Reconsideration of Certain Portions of the Court’s June 6, 2011 Order Denying His Motion to 4 Dismiss (“Motion”).

6 INTRODUCTION

7 Nothing in Daifotis’s Motion supports changing the Court’s decision that the First 8 through Sixth Claims in the SEC’s Complaint are legally sufficient. First, his challenge to 9 the Complaint’s claim under Rule 10b-5 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (“Exchange 10 Act”) [17 CFR § 240.10b-5] fails because Daifotis admits that the Complaint alleges his 11 “making” of statements, even under the standard set forth in Janus Capital Group, Inc. v.
 12 First Derivative Traders, 131 S. Ct. 2296, 2302 (2011).

14 Second, Daifotis errs in asking the Court to strike factual allegations that do not meet
 15 Janus’s test for making statements within the context of Rule 10b-5. Those additional factual
 16 allegations in the Complaint remain relevant to other primary and aiding-and-abetting claims
 17 in the Complaint.
 18

19 Third, Daifotis erroneously argues that Janus applies to claims under Section 17(a) of 20 the Securities Act of 1933 (“Securities Act”) [15 U.S.C. § 77q(a)] and Section 34(b) under the 21 Investment Company Act (“ICA”) [15 U.S.C. §80a-33(b)]. Janus applies only to Rule 10b-5, 22 not any other statutes or rules relied upon in the Complaint, but even if Janus applied to those 23 other statutes, the Complaint sufficiently alleges claims against Daifotis. Finally, Janus has 24 no impact on the Complaint’s aiding-and-abetting claims, which are sufficiently stated and 25 are not a proper subject of Daifotis’s Motion. For those reasons, Daifotis’s Motion should be 26 denied.
 27

1 PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

3 Defendants filed separate motions to dismiss the Complaint on April 7, 2011. In an 4 order entered on June 6, 2011 (the “June 6 Order”), the Court granted in part and denied in 5 part the motions. The Court denied most aspects of the defendants’ motions, upholding most 6 of the claims in the Complaint. The Court, however, dismissed with prejudice the Seventh
 7 and Eighth Claims in the Complaint, and dismissed or limited certain aspects of other claims.¹
 8 The Court allowed the SEC to seek leave to amend certain of the allegations.² The time for 9 seeking such amendments has not yet run.³

10 On June 13, 2011, the Supreme Court issued its decision in Janus. Defendants filed a 11 joint motion on June 14, 2011, seeking leave to file a motion for reconsideration. Defendants
 12 asked only for leave to seek reconsideration of “the primary liability portions of the Court’s 13 [June 6, 2011] Order” See Defendants’ June 14, 2011 Joint Motion (docket no. 59) at 5.
 14 The Court entered an order on June 15, 2011, permitting defendants “to move for 15 reconsideration of the June 6 Order denying defendants’ motions to dismiss the Commission’s
 16
 17
 18
 19

20 ¹ The Court found that the Complaint did not allege sufficient participation by Merk
 21 with regard to a particular email and a “Manager’s Discussion” document alleged in 22 paragraphs 153 and 159 of the Complaint (June 6 Order at 9), the Court dismissed the scheme
 23 liability theory (id. at 13) against Merk, dismissed the claim under Section 17(a)(2) of the Securities Act (id. at 14) against Merk, and limited the claim under Investment Advisers Act
 Rule 206(4)-8 to conduct after September 10, 2007 (id. at 16).

24 ² The June 6 Order permitted the SEC to seek to amend the Complaint with regard to 25 the allegations in paragraphs 153 and 159 against Merk and the claim under Section 17(a)(2) against Merk.

26 ³ The June 6 Order originally gave the SEC fourteen days to seek to amend the 27 complaint, but under the Court’s June 17, 2011 order on the parties’ stipulation (docket no.
 28 65), that time was extended to twenty-one days after the Court rules on the defendants’ present motions for reconsideration.

1 primary liability claims.” See Order entered June 15, 2011 (docket no. 61) (emphasis
 2 added).

4 On June 17, 2011, the Court entered an order (docket no. 65) on the stipulation of the 5 parties, which among other things, set a schedule for the defendants’ motion for 6 reconsideration, and amended the date for the SEC to move for leave to file an amended
 7 complaint and for defendants to answer (i.e., providing that the SEC has 21 days after the 8 Court rules on the motions for reconsideration to file its motion for leave to amend the 9 complaint, and allowing defendants 14 days to answer).⁴
 10

THE JANUS DECISION

12 The Supreme Court in Janus held that, “[f]or purposes of Rule 10b-5, the maker of a 13 statement is the person or entity with ultimate authority over the statement including its 14 content and whether and how to communicate it.”⁵ 131 S. Ct. at 2302. (emphasis added).
 15 The Court also provided a significant example of who has such authority: “[I]n the ordinary 16 case, attribution within a statement or implicit from surrounding circumstances is strong 17 evidence that a statement was made by — and only by — the party to whom it is attributed.”
 18
Id. (emphasis added).
 19

 21
 22 ⁴ The SEC anticipates that it will file a motion for leave to file an amended complaint.
 23 At this time, the SEC anticipates that it will seek to add or amend certain allegations to 24 address certain of the items that the Court’s June 6 Order found to be deficient, to add other
 25 appropriate claims or allegations of additional misstatements by defendants, and to address
 26 other issues as needed based upon the Court’s ruling on the defendants’ motions for 27 reconsideration.
 28

29 ⁵ Daifotis (Motion at 3-4) erroneously focuses on whether he was the “ultimate 30 authority” of the Schwab entities with whom he was associated. That is not the standard
 31 under Janus, which merely addressed whether a defendant has ultimate authority over a 32 particular “statement.”

The Supreme Court based its decision on two grounds. First, the Court considered the dictionary definition of the word “make” in the context of the Rule 10b-5(b) phrase “to make any . . . statement.” The Court concluded that the phrase is “the approximate equivalent of ‘to state.’” 131 S. Ct. at 2302.

Second, the Court reasoned that applying a broader definition of “make” would expand the scope of liability in private plaintiffs’ actions under Rule 10b-5. The Court noted that its prior decision in Central Bank of Denver, N.A. v. First Interstate Bank of Denver, N.A., 511 U.S. 164, 180 (1994), precluded private rights of action against aiders and abettors. The Court stated, “[s]uch suits – against entities that contribute ‘substantial assistance’ to the making of a statement but do not actually make it may be brought by the SEC, see 15 U.S.C.A § 78t(e), but not by private parties.” 131 S. Ct. at 2302. A broader definition of “make,” the Court stated, would “undermine” that principle. Id.

While Janus narrowed the definition of “to make” a statement for purposes of claims under Rule 10b-5, that decision does not lessen the viability of the Complaint in this case because, even under Janus, the Complaint states actionable Rule 10b-5 claims against both defendants.

ARGUMENT

I. DAIFOTIS COMMITTED PRIMARY VIOLATIONS, UNDER THE RULE ANNOUNCED IN JANUS

A. Daifotis Concedes That He Was the “Maker” of Some of the Misstatements Alleged In the Complaint

Daifotis's Motion (at 4) concedes that, of the misstatements⁶ set forth in the Complaint, Daifotis "purportedly made only five of them." Daifotis's Motion (Appendix C)

⁶For the sake of brevity, we generally use the term “misstatement” to refer collectively to all misrepresentations or misleading omissions of material fact within a single PLAINTIFF’S OPPOSITION TO DAIFOTIS’S MOTION FOR RECONSIDERATION

1 concedes that the Complaint sufficiently alleges that Daifotis made these “[a]lleged
 2 [m]isstatements”:

- 3 • September 2005 advertisement quoting Daifotis and containing his picture
 4 (Compl., para. 74(f));
- 5 • Spring 2006 brochure, attributing a statement to Daifotis (Compl., para. 74(b));
- 6 • August 2007 statement spoken by Daifotis in a conference call (Compl., para.
 7 68);
- 8 • August 14, 2007 statement spoken by Daifotis in a conference call (Compl., 9 para. 141);
- 10 • August 16, 2007 statement spoken by Daifotis in a conference call (Compl., 11 para. 142).

12 As discussed below, Daifotis’s count is short. However, the fact that the Complaint 13 indisputably alleges that Daifotis “made” misstatements under the standard announced in 14 Janus is a sufficient basis upon which to uphold the Rule 10b-5 claim against him. See, e.g., 15 Zaluski v. United American Healthcare Corp., 527 F.3d 564, 573 (6th Cir. 2008) (noting case 16 law holding that “a single statement” that was false was actionable). Daifotis seems to attach 17 some significance to the argument that he was not the maker of many other misstatements
 18 alleged in the Complaint. That makes no difference for purposes of the present motion, 19 because once he made even a single misstatement, he triggered his liability. Id. at 573.

 22
 23
 24
 25
 26 document. Each of those documents could include multiple such misrepresentations or 27 omissions, but specifying each of them is not necessary for resolution of the pending motions for reconsideration.

1 B. Daifotis Was the “Maker” of Other Misstatements Alleged 2 in the Complaint That Were Attributed to Him Implicitly

3 As noted above, Daifotis’s Motion erroneously asserts that the Complaint alleges he 4 was the “maker” of only five misstatements. Actually, under Janus, the Complaint
5 sufficiently alleges that Daifotis made at least two other misstatements (in addition to those 6 that, as discussed above, Daifotis acknowledged), for a total of at least seven.

7 Janus, held that “attribution within a statement or implicit from surrounding 8 circumstances is strong evidence” that a defendant was the maker of the statement. 131 S. Ct.
9 at 2302. The Complaint alleges at least two additional statements that are attributed to 10 Daifotis implicitly by surrounding circumstances, and thus were made by him:

- 12 • A November 2007 “Manager’s Discussion” issued to the public under 13 Daifotis’s title, “Manager.” (Compl., para. 159). A copy is submitted
14 herewith as Exhibit 1. Daifotis was the lead portfolio manager of YieldPlus, 15 and publicly held himself out in that role. Daifotis was actively involved in the 16 day-to-day operations of YieldPlus (Compl., para. 62). The title “Manager’s
17 Discussion” and reference to “Manager” are sufficient facts and circumstances 18 to implicitly attribute the statement to Daifotis.
- 20 • An advertisement described in paragraph 74(g) of the Complaint.⁷ A copy is 21 submitted herewith as Exhibit 2. The advertisement included Daifotis’s name
22 and picture – with no other person’s name or picture – and thus implicitly 23 attributed its contents to Daifotis. The advertisement states that YieldPlus is 24 “an ultrashort bond fund, not a money market fund. It seeks to provide higher

27 7 While the Complaint refers to the advertisement as being a September 2005
28 document, the advertisement actually was published in May 2005.

1 yield with slightly higher risk than a money market fund, but maintains
 2 minimal fluctuation in share price and lower risk than a longer-term bond
 3 fund.” This was misleading for the reasons described in paragraph 75 of the 4 Complaint.

6 The implication with regard to the above statements was that they were made by 7 Daifotis. Accordingly, he can be held primarily liable for such statements under Janus.

II. BECAUSE PRIMARY LIABILITY UNDER RULE 10b-5 HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED, DAIFOTIS'S MOTION FOR RECONSIDERATION SHOULD BE DENIED AND NO FURTHER INQUIRY INTO THE SUFFICIENCY OF THE COMPLAINT IS NEEDED

11 The decision in Janus was the only ground relied upon by Daifotis in seeking leave to 12 file his present Motion. As shown above, the Complaint's Rule 10b-5 claim against Daifotis
 13 easily survives the Janus rule because Daifotis indisputably “made” multiple misstatements
 14 alleged in the Complaint.
 15

16 We respectfully suggest that, for several reasons, it would be an inefficient use of 17 resources at this juncture to parse every other statement alleged in the Complaint to determine 18 whether it also meets the standards set forth in Janus. First, such an inquiry is better left to a 19 later stage of the case, after full factual development in discovery. In light of the new rule
 20 announced in Janus, discovery in this case will explore the issue of who had authority over 21 particular statements, including those not attributed to any natural person. Once those facts
 22 are uncovered, the issue of whether Daifotis had the requisite authority over other statements
 23 can be better assessed. Daifotis frequently points to the fact that the SEC conducted an 24 investigation prior to filing this case. But that was before Janus was decided. As Daifotis
 25 readily concedes, Janus changes the prevailing law in this circuit, so it is reasonable that 26 further inquiries are needed.
 27

1 Second, there would be little practical benefit to evaluating every allegation in the 2 Complaint under the Janus rule. Statements that might be insufficient to allege primary
 3 liability for Rule 10b-5 claims under Janus remain relevant to other claims in the Complaint.
 4 As discussed below, Janus does not apply to claims under Section 17(a) of the Securities Act
 5 and Section 34(b) of the ICA. Thus, the factual allegations that do not meet the Janus test for 6 purposes of Rule 10b-5 remain a proper basis for primary liability claims under those other
 7 statutes. Such allegations also remain proper factual predicates for the aiding and abetting
 8 claims that the Court upheld and that Janus did not affect. For example, allegations that the 9 defendants substantially participated or assisted in misstatements are relevant to establishing 10 liability for aiding and abetting. See, e.g., SEC v. Fehn, 97 F.3d 1276, 1293 (9th Cir. 1996)
 11 (“The term ‘substantial assistance’ has been interpreted to include ‘participation in the 12 editing’ of information for the purpose of marketing securities.”) (quoting Molecular Technol.
 13 Corp. v. Valentine, 925 F.2d 910, 918 (6th Cir. 1991)).
 14

15 The Complaint includes claims for aiding and abetting violations of Rule 10b-5 (the 16 Complaint’s Second Claim), Section 206(4) of the Advisers Act and Rule 206(4)-8 (Fifth 17 Claim), and Sections 206(1) and (2) of the Adviser’s Act (Fourth Claim) (asserted against 18 Merk only). Janus does not change the nature of involvement necessary for aiding-and-19 abetting liability.

20 Third, the Court already ruled that even statements that do not by themselves furnish a 21 basis for primary liability still are a proper subject for discovery. See Court’s June 6 Order at
 22. For all of the above reasons, little would be accomplished in pigeon-holing each of the 23 Complaint’s allegations at this still early juncture of the case.

1 For the above reasons, Daifotis has no proper basis for his request that all allegations
 2 that do not establish Rule 10b-5 liability under Janus should be stricken. Motion at 8 n.4. As 3 we noted in the last round of briefing, “motions to strike are disfavored and generally should 4 not be granted unless the matter to be stricken clearly could have no possible bearing on the 5 subject of the litigation.” Castaneda v. Burger King Corp., 597 F. Supp. 2d 1035, 1046 (N.D.
 6 Cal. 2009), citing Platte Anchor Bolt, Inc. v. IHI, Inc., 352 F.Supp.2d 1048, 1057 (N.D. Cal.
 7 2004); Lilley v. Charren, 936 F.Supp. 708, 713 (N.D. Cal. 1996) (same), citing Colaprico v.
 8 Sun Microsystems, Inc., 758 F.Supp. 1335, 1339 (N.D. Cal. 1991). Because all of the factual
 9 allegations in the Complaint remain relevant to the Complaint’s claims, they should not be 10 stricken.
 11

12 III. THE SECTION 17(a) CLAIM IS SUFFICIENT

13 Daifotis (Mo. at 7 n.3) also argues that the rule in Janus applies to claims under 14 Section 17(a) of the Securities Act [15 U.S.C. § 77q(a)] (the Complaint’s Third Claim). He 15 cites several cases stating that the elements of Section 17(a) claims are similar to those of 16 Rule 10b-5 claims.⁸ But the elements are not identical, especially after Janus. In particular, 17 the word “make” – which is present in Rule 10b-5(b) and which the Supreme Court relied 18 upon in reaching its decision in Janus – is noticeably absent from the operative language of 19 Section 17(a).

20 Janus is silent about Section 17(a), saying nothing that expressly or implicitly 21 indicates that the case’s holding should be extended to that provision. Moreover, the

 23
 24
 25 ⁸ Daifotis cites SEC v. First Jersey Sec. Inc., 101 F.3d 1450 (2d Cir. 1996); Teamsters
 26 Local 282 Pension Trust Fund v. Angelos, 762 F.2d 522 (7th Cir. 1985), and Stephenson v.
 27 Calpine Conifers II, 652 F.2d 808 (9th Cir. 1981), overruled on other grounds by In re
Washington Public Power Supply Sys. Sec. Litig., 823 F.2d 1349 (9th Cir. 1987).

1 Supreme Court's stated reasons for its ruling in Janus are inapplicable to Section 17(a). First,
 2 the Court relied on the dictionary definition of Rule 10b-5's phrase "to make." Rule 10b-5
 3 makes it unlawful "to make any untrue statement." The Court held that one "makes a 4 statement by stating it." 131 S. Ct. at 2302.

5 But the operative language in Section 17(a) is entirely different from that in Rule 10b-
 6 5.⁹ Section 17(a) does not base liability on a defendant's "making" a false statement. Rather,
 7 Section 17(a) makes it unlawful (1) "to employ any device, scheme, or artifice to defraud,"
 8 (2) "to obtain money or property by means of any untrue statement" or omission of material
 9 facts, or (3) "to engage in" certain types of transactions. Because the operative language in 10 Section 17(a) does not contain the crucial "to make" phrase upon which Janus was based, the 11 rule announced in Janus does not apply to Section 17(a) claims.

12 This difference between Rule 10b-5 and Section 17(a) was noted in SEC v. Tambone, 13 550 F.3d 106, 128 (1st Cir. 2008),¹⁰ which held that:

14 based on our reading of the text of section 17(a)(2), we conclude 15 that this provision covers conduct that may not be prohibited by 16 section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5. Specifically, primary liability may 17 attach under section 17(a)(2) even when the defendant has not 18 himself made a false statement in connection with the offer or 19 sale of a security.

20 ⁹ Section 17(a) [15 U.S.C. § 77(q)(a)] makes it unlawful to:

- 21 (1) to employ any device, scheme, or artifice to defraud,
 22 (2) to obtain money or property by means of any untrue statement of a material fact or 23 any omission to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements
 24 made, in light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading;
 25 or
 (3) to engage in any transaction, practice, or course of business which operates or would operate as a fraud or deceit upon the purchaser.

26 ¹⁰ The First Circuit initially vacated, but later reinstated the portions of Tambone
 27 regarding Section 17(a)(2), among other points. See SEC v. Tambone, 597 F.3d 436, 450 (1st Cir. 2010).

1 (Emphasis added.)

2 The Tambone court focused on the language of Section 17(a)(2). The court stated:

3 [Section 17(a)(2)] prohibits an individual from “obtain[ing] money
4 or property by means of any untrue statement.” It does not state,
5 however, that the seller must himself make that untrue statement.
Indeed, the text suggests that the opposite is true—that it is 6 irrelevant for purposes of liability whether the seller uses his own false statement or one made by another individual. Liability 7 attaches so long as the statement is used “to obtain money or property,” regardless of its source.

8 Id. at 127. Because primary liability under Section 17(a)(2) does not depend on a defendant’s
9 “making” a misstatement, Janus’s interpretation of “make” is not relevant to Section 17(a)(2) 10 claims.

11 Second, the Court in Janus relied upon the principle that a broader definition of 12 “make” under Rule 10b-5 would expand the scope of private suits under that rule, contrary to 13 Central Bank, which limited the scope of liability in private actions under Rule 10b-5. Janus, 14 131 S. Ct. at 2302. But no such concerns exist with regard to Section 17(a) because there is 15 no private right of action under that statute; only the SEC may bring actions under Section
16 17(a). See In re Washington Public Power Supply System Sec. Litig., 823 F.2d 1349, 1358
17 (9th Cir. 1987) (holding that there is no private right of action under Section 17(a)).

18 Therefore, the Janus rule does not apply to claims under Section 17(a). Rather,
19 Section 17(a) remains subject to the broad interpretations applied in pre-Janus securities fraud 20 case law. Accordingly, for example, claims under Section 17(a)(2) (making it unlawful “to 21 obtain money or property by means of” misstatements) remain properly based upon all of the 22 misstatements alleged in the Complaint in which Daifotis substantially participated.¹¹

23
24
25
26
27
28 ¹¹ But even if Janus applied to Section 17(a) claims, the Complaint sufficiently alleges primary liability based upon Daifotis having made the statements discussed in section I, above.

1 IV. THE SECTION 34(b) CLAIM IS SUFFICIENT

2 Daifotis (Motion at 8) erroneously argues that Janus requires dismissal of the claim
 3 under Section 34(b) of the ICA [15 U.S.C. §80a-33(b)] (the Complaint's Sixth Claim).

4 Daifotis notes that Section 34(b) makes it unlawful for any person "to make" misstatements in 5 certain documents required to be filed, transmitted or held under the ICA. He asserts that 6 because only entities such as Schwab are required to file, transmit or hold such documents,
 7 only those entities can "make" the misstatements under the Janus rule.

8 Daifotis is mistaken for two reasons: Janus does not apply to Section 34(b) claims
 9 and, even if it did, Section 34(b) prohibits misstatements of precisely the types that Daifotis
 10 "made" under the Janus rule.

11 A. Janus Does Not Apply to ICA Section 34(b) Claims

12 Daifotis relies upon the incorrect assumption that Janus applies to Section 34(b)
 13 merely because that section and Rule 10b-5 both use the word "make." In fact, words do not 14 always have the same meaning, even when they appear in the same statute, let alone different 15 statutes, so they must be interpreted in context. As the Supreme Court stated in SEC v.
 16 National Secs., Inc., 393 U.S. 453, 466 (1969):

17 Although the interdependence of the various sections of the securities laws
 18 is certainly a relevant factor in any interpretation of the language Congress 19 has chosen, ordinary rules of statutory construction still apply. The 20 meaning of particular phrases must be determined in context, SEC v. C.M.
Joiner Leasing Corp., 320 U.S. 344, 350-51 (1943). Congress itself has 21 cautioned that the same words may take on a different coloration in 22 different sections of the securities laws; both the 1933 and the 1934 Acts
 23 preface their lists of general definitions with the phrase 'unless the context
 24 otherwise requires.' 15 U.S.C. § 77b; 15 U.S.C. § 78c. We must therefore 25 address ourselves to the meaning of the words 'purchase or sale' in the 26 context of [section] 10(b). Whatever these or similar words may mean in 27 the numerous other contexts in which they appear in the securities laws, only this one narrow question is presented here.

1 See also General Dynamics Land Systems, Inc. v. Cline, 540 U.S. 581, 595 (2004)
 2 (even words used in the same statute can have different meanings, depending on “the 3 connection in which the words are used”).

5 Rule 10b-5 and Section 34(b) have different contexts and need not be interpreted in 6 lockstep.¹² As discussed above, Janus applied a narrow construction of the word “make” in 7 Rule 10b-5 largely because expanding the scope of the term under that rule would 8 impermissibly expand the scope of liability in private plaintiff securities actions. The 9 Supreme Court stated that allowing a broader interpretation of Rule 10b-5 would 10 “undermine” Central Bank (Janus, 131 S. Ct. at 2302) and that the narrow construction that 11 the Court employed “accords with the narrow scope that we must give the implied right of 12 action [under Rule 10b-5].” Id. That principle, however, does not apply to Section 34(b),
 13 under which there is no private right of action. See Bellikoff v. Eaton Vance Corp., 481 F.3d
 14 110, 117 (2d Cir. 2007) (no private right of action under Section 34(b)).
 15

16 Thus, Daifotis does not prove his point by citing a case for the unremarkable 17 proposition that “Section 34(b) of the [ICA] . . . prohibits material misrepresentations or 18 omissions in terms similar to [Rule] 10b-5.” Motion at 8, citing SEC v. Pimco Advisors Fund
 19 Mgmt. LLC, 341 F. Supp. 2d 454, 471 (S.D.N.Y. 2004). Janus changed the meaning that 20 must now be given to the word “make” in Rule 10b-5 largely because of considerations
 21 unique to that rule (e.g., the impact on private litigation if a different meaning were used). It
 22 does not follow that the same narrow meaning must be given to the word “make” when used 23

 25
 26 ¹² Thus, for example, courts have interpreted Rule 10b-5 as requiring at least 27 recklessness, see Gebhart v. SEC, 595 F.3d 1034, 1041 (9th Cir. 2010), but have held that 28 violations under Section 34(b) need not be willful, see SEC v. Advance Growth Capital
Growth Corp., 470 F.2d 40, 52 (7th Cir. 1972) (violation of 34(b) need not be willful).

1 in statutes that do not permit private suits, such as Section 34(b). Therefore, the word “make”
 2 in Section 34(b) continues to have the meaning ascribed to it in pre-Janus securities fraud
 3 cases.

5 B. Daifotis “Made” Misstatements Prohibited by Section 34(b)

6 Even if Janus applied to Section 34(b) claims, Daifotis was the maker of 7 misstatements prohibited by Section 34(b). Daifotis mistakenly suggests that Section 34(b)
 8 prohibits misstatements only in documents that Schwab Investments filed with the SEC, over 9 which he claims he did not have “ultimate authority” and which he did not sign. Motion at 8-10 9.
 11

12 But Daifotis overlooks the fact that Section 34(b) also applies to a number of other 13 types of documents containing statements that Daifotis did make, as discussed in section I, 14 above. Section 34(b) makes it unlawful for “any person” to make misstatements in any 15 “document filed . . . pursuant to” the ICA. Under Section 24 of the ICA [15 U.S.C. § 80a-
 16 24] and Rule 24b-3 thereunder [17 C.F.R. § 270.24b-3], this includes any “advertisement, 17 pamphlet, circular, form letter or other sales literature” for distribution to prospective
 18 investors that are filed with organizations such as the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority
 19 (FINRA), which are “deemed filed” with the SEC.¹³
 20

 22
 23 ¹³ Rule 24b-3 [17 C.F.R. § 270.24b-3] provides:
 24
 25 Any advertisement, pamphlet, circular, form letter or other sales literature 26 addressed to or intended for distribution to prospective investors shall be 27 deemed filed with the Commission for purposes of section 24(b) of the 28 Act [15 U.S.C. 80a-24(b)] upon filing with a national securities association registered under Section 15A of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [15 U.S.C. 78o] that has adopted rules providing standards for the investment company advertising practices of its members and has established and implemented procedures to review that advertising.

1 Therefore, Section 34(b) prohibits misstatements in sales literature for distribution to 2 prospective investors that are filed with FINRA. Section I, above, details such sales literature
 3 in which Daifotis made misstatements. Therefore, even under the Janus rule, Daifotis “made”
 4 misstatements prohibited by Section 34(b), and the Complaint properly alleges a claim under 5 that provision.

7 V. THE AIDING-AND-ABETTING CLAIMS SHOULD NOT BE DISMISSED

8 Daifotis argues that the aiding-and-abetting claims should be dismissed. Motion at 9-9 10. That request should be denied because it lacks merit and cannot properly be raised in this 10 motion for reconsideration.

11

12 A. The Aiding-and-Abetting Claims Are Properly Stated

13 Daifotis claims that the SEC’s aiding-and-abetting claims must be rejected because they 14 are based on primary violations that are “based on Mr. Merk’s ‘substantial participation’.”
 15 That is not so. To the extent that aiding-and-abetting claims against Daifotis are based upon 16 Merk’s primary violations, those were primary violations that meet the standards of Janus.
 17 Daifotis (Motion at 9, n.5) points to this Court’s June 6 Order, but Daifotis omits crucial 18 language. The Court’s June 6 Order (at 11) states:

19

20 it is undisputed that the complaint contains direct statements by 21 Daifotis and Merk that serve as a basis for the direct liability
 22 claims against them, as set forth above. The same alleged 23 misrepresentations by Merk can serve as a primary violation
 24 underlying aiding and abetting by Daifotis, and vice versa.

25

26 (Emphasis added).

27 FINRA is “registered with the [SEC] as a national securities association pursuant to § 15A of 28 the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 . . .”). McGinn, Smith & Co., Inc. v. FINRA, No. 11-
 825 (CKK), 2011 WL 1833242, at *1 (D.D.C. May 15, 2011).

1 Thus, the quoted language merely pointed out that direct statements by one defendant
 2 (which would suffice to trigger Rule 10b-5 liability even under Janus) can serve as the 3 primary violation for aiding-and-abetting claims against the other defendant. Nothing about 4 that analysis renders the aiding-and-abetting claims improper, even under Janus.

6 Moreover, the Complaint makes clear that most of the Rule 10b-5 primary violations
 7 that Daifotis aided and abetted were committed by the Schwab entities. The Complaint's
 8 Second Claim for Relief is based upon aiding-and-abetting Rule 10b-5 violations. Paragraph 9 178 in that claim alleges that Daifotis "knowingly provided substantial assistance to CSIM
 10 [Charles Schwab Investment Management, Inc.] and CS&Co. [Charles Schwab & Co., Inc.] . . .
 11 . and thus aided and abetted such violations." Nothing in Janus undermines the notion that 12 the Schwab entities can "make" misstatements constituting violations that Daifotis could aid 13 and abet.
 14

15 Daifotis further argues that the Complaint attributes some misstatements to CS&Co.
 16 and CSIM. Motion at 10. He claims that those were separate legal entities that observed
 17 corporate formalities. Id. But those are factual arguments that cannot be considered on a 18 motion to dismiss. Nothing in Janus precludes the possibility that two persons or entities
 19 both made a misstatement resulting in a violation that Daifotis aided and abetted.
 20

21 For purposes of determining the sufficiency of the Complaint, it makes no difference
 22 which particular Schwab entity committed the primary violation. The precise parameters of 23 CS&Co.'s and CSIM's roles in misstatements are properly left to be hashed out as the case
 24 progresses, not in the context of a motion to dismiss. To the extent that Daifotis asserts that 25 the Complaint lacks adequate detail about each entity's specific role, he is raising issues already decided against him in the Court's June 6 Order. Therefore, no basis exists for Daifotis's attack on the aiding-and-abetting claims.
 26
 27

B. Daifotis Cannot Properly Challenge the Aiding-and-Aetting Claims in the Present Motion for Reconsideration

Daifotis cannot properly raise arguments about the aiding and abetting claims at this time. The present motion for reconsideration should be limited to reconsideration of the Court's ruling on primary liability claims. The defendants only sought permission to file a motion for reconsideration on primary liability claims, and the Court's order only permitted defendants "to move for reconsideration of the June 6 order denying defendants' motions to dismiss the Commission's primary liability claims." See Order entered 6/15/2011, docket no. 61 (emphasis added). Therefore, there is no reason for the Court to revisit its denial of defendants' motions to dismiss any aiding and abetting claims.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Daifotis's Motion should be denied.
